

CALL FOR PAPERS

ASIA PACIFIC OFFSHORE CONFERENCE AND EXHIBITION

Challenges in Deepwater Oil & Gas Industry

APOC 2010

13 - 14 DECEMBER 2010 | BERJAYA TIMES SQUARE HOTEL & CONVENTION CENTRE, KUALA LUMPUR

INTRODUCTION

The marine and offshore industries have gone through innovative development over last few years. This industry is expected to strengthen in the coming years. Exploration of new oil and gas fields has now shifted towards deeper water. The demand for Floating Production Storage And Offloading (FPSO) and other types of floating platforms have thus increased.

This premiere Asia Pacific Offshore Conference And Exhibition (APOC 2010) aims to promote interaction between experts from around the globe, particularly those from the Asia Pacific rim. APOC 2010 will specifically addresses "Challenges in Deepwater Oil And Gas Industry".

SCOPE

APOC 2010 aims to cover the following fields:

INDUSTRY PERSPECTIVE

- Development of New Fields
- Manpower Development

SAFETY AND GUIDELINES

- Environmental Concerns
- Sustainability
- Safety and Reliability

SYSTEM AND DESIGN

- Production platforms
- FPSO
- Offshore Support Vessels
- Subsea systems
- Design
- Construction
- Model Testing

MANAGEMENT AND OPERATION

- Manpower development
- Ownership (e.g. overlapping claims / oil royalty)
- Legal Issues

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

ATILLA INCECIK is a Professor of Offshore Engineering and Head of Department of Naval Architecture and Marine Engineering at the University of Strathclyde, Glasgow, Scotland.

Professor Incecik obtained his BSc in Naval Architecture and Marine Engineering in 1975 from the Technical University of Istanbul and his PhD in Ocean Engineering in 1982 from the University of Glasgow. He has been involved with teaching and research concerning the theoretical and experimental hydrodynamics and hydro-mechanics of floating offshore structures over the last thirty-three years. Professor Incecik has published over 80 papers in his area of research during the last 10 years. He was Lloyd's Register Professor of Offshore Engineering and Head of School of Marine Science and Technology at the University Newcastle upon Tyne between May, 1996 and September, 2007. Professor Incecik was Chairman (2002-2005) and member (2005-2008) of the Executive Committee of the International Towing Tank Conference. He is currently Editor-in-Chief of Ocean Engineering Journal.
